About Me

"Turning ideas into scalable backend systems."

I'm a .NET Backend Developer who enjoys building clean, scalable, and real-world web applications. My journey in programming started at university, where I discovered how much I love turning ideas into working systems.

I combine strong technical knowledge with problem-solving skills to deliver reliable systems on time. I thrive on solving problems efficiently and delivering results that make a real impact.

I'm continuously improving my skills through projects and teamwork, always looking for new challenges that push me to grow as a developer.
